Celebrate Darwin Day at the Connecticut Science Center
Saturday February 10th 11:00am – 2:00pm

Show your public support of Science by visiting the Connecticut Science Center on Saturday, February 10th for a celebration of Darwin Day! Darwin Day is an annual event celebrating the birth of Charles Darwin to inspire people throughout the world to reflect and act on the principles of intellectual bravery, perpetual curiosity, scientific thinking, and the hunger for truth as embodied in Charles Darwin.

• Professor Kenneth Noll of UConn is an expert in evolutionary biology and will portray Charles Darwin as he presents on the topic “What is a Species?”
• Mr. Darwin (Professor Noll) will be available all day to take selfies with attendees, tell stories about Mr. Darwin, and answer questions about Mr. Darwin and evolutionary biology.
• The Art Truck will help youngsters make a tree of life craft or finch drawing or the like
• Enjoy a piece of birthday cake and sing happy birthday to Mr. Darwin
• The British documentary, Galapagos 3D, will be playing in the theater at 2:00pm
• Darwin fun facts will be on the Jumbotron all day
• Animal Adaptation mini-talks will be ongoing in Science Alley
• Toddlers in Story Time Circle will hear from a children’s book on evolution
• Governor Malloy and Senator Blumenthal have been invited to attend

The Connecticut Science Center is located at:
